Ocean Beach Ball Club Great Publicity Asset

STRONG LOCAL TEAM
UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT
PLAYS HERE SUNDAY

The Ocean Beach baseball club defeated the Neighborhood House team last Sunday by a score of 4 to 3, crediting another victory to the Beachites. The local club is well satisfied regarding the splendid support the business men of Ocean Beach are giving them, and in return the management has tried to select the best amateur ball players the county has to offer.

Next Sunday, manager W. B. McBride announces that the Beach club will play the fast General Tire team on the local diamond, the latter nine having been defeated only twice in fifty-seven games played. This will constitute the sixth game of the twelve games scheduled for the county league and as it promises to be one of the hottest contests ever staged on the beach diamond, it deserves to be largely attended. Don't miss it! It'll be a hummer!

SCHOOL CALENDAR
SETS OFFICIAL OPENINGS,
DISREGARDING HOLIDAYS

The Board of Education has solved the holiday problem of opening and closing the public schools by deciding that there could be no harm in starting on a holiday and having another holiday after one day of school. As a result, the schools will open officially Sept. 7, Labor Day, but nobody will be there until Tuesday, Sept. 8. The school year will end June 25.

The holidays provided for on the calendar are: Sept. 7, Labor Day; Sept. 9, Admission Day; Nov. 25 to 26, Thanksgiving vacation; Dec. 18 to Jan. 4, Christmas and New Year vacation; Feb. 22, Washington's birthday; March 27 to April 4, Easter vacation; May 31, Memorial Day (observed on Monday, as May 30 falls on Sunday).

The first semester will end Jan. 29, and the second semester will begin Feb. 1.

The Beach Barber Shop is also the agency for the Peerless Laundry.

FOURTH OF JULY
FORTY-SIX YEARS AGO
AT OCEAN BEACH

Can you guess how many permanent residents received an excusion party at Ocean Beach on July 4, 1879? There's a very interesting item about it in next week's installment of Winifred Davidson's LOMA LORE series, published exclusively in these columns, with all rights reserved by the author.

For Women Skaters

MANAGER "ED" KICKHAM
SUPPLIES SKATES FREE WITH OUR COUPON ADMISSION

Next Monday afternoon all ladies of the beach and bay districts, from La Jolla to Point Loma, inclusive, will be entitled to complimentary admittance at the fine, new Mission Beach Roller Rink, where Manager Edward A. Kickham will supply them with skates free of charge, upon presentation of the coupon printed elsewhere in these columns.

This generous offer by the jovial and popular "Ed" is made in cooperation with "The Beach News" as a sort of get-acquainted proposition for the women folks of the beach sections of San Diego. There are no "ifs" and "ands" to it. The coupon printed in the regular Rink advertisement will admit any lady of La Jolla, Pacific Beach, Mission Beach, Ocean Beach and Point Loma to the privileges and use of the Roller Rink, with skates furnished free.

It's a happy and healthy recreation, and the excellent facilities of the new M. B. Roller Rink positively make it a pleasure to skate.

Ladies, you'll be heartily welcomed. Go early and enjoy yourselves.

Our Ears A-Tingling And Our Hearts Exultant

CHEERFUL CONGRATULATIONS FROM A GIFTED AUTHOR AND TRUE FRIEND

Point Loma, Calif., June 1, 1925.

Dear Kirk and Katherine:

The compliments upon the general appearance and contents of the grand inaugural Mission Beach number of "The Beach News" have been so many and so lavish that your ears must have been tingling and your hearts exulting these last days.

One speaks of the striking clearness of all the cuts and wonders by what magic you succeeded in getting the high-class magazine effect instead of the usual blur of the newspaper. Another has many fine things to say about the lay-out of the ads, the number and attractiveness of them. You must have been swamped with advertising demands for this special issue.

Then an old-timer here speaks of the changed conditions that prevail all over Point Loma—Loma Portal, Roseville, Ocean Beach and even old La Playa—since you came among us three years ago and began stirring about with your enterprise and vision and splendid executive ability. Do you realize that your "push" and persistence have been largely responsible for the initiating of much of the phenomenal activity hereabouts? Old-timers think so, at any rate.

It means much to a community to number such live-wires as you are among its citizens: hard-working, clear-thinking men and women who can see a few years into the future and plan ahead to meet the exigencies of progress. Your transplanted New York get-thereness is bound to succeed, and we congratulate ourselves upon your presence here where so long you have been needed.

You know without my telling you that "The Beach News" has my best wishes. I hope that you two can continue as you have started, in justice and fair play to all, with prejudice toward none, to bring your bright weekly newspaper to the highest success of a big, powerful daily, recognized far and wide as the accomplisher of fine and mighty results.

Faithfully yours,
WINIFRED DAVIDSON.

Stern and Swift Justice For Beach Malefactors

JUDGE DeLONG GIVES WARNING FROM BENCH TO DISTURBERS OF PEACE

Judge Charles B. DeLong, president of the Mission Beach chamber of commerce, sitting for Judge Chambers, in police court last Monday, had occasion to try Dayton Edmon, who had been arrested, with E. H. Moore and L. R. Barnes, on Sunday night, by patrolman Kluge and motorcycle patrolman Neely, on a charge of violating the Wright act and creating a disturbance.

Judge DeLong emphasized his opinion about beach malefactors by making a five-minute speech to the defendant.

"The Spreckels people and some others have spent a tremendous amount of money to start Mission Beach," Judge DeLong said, "and it is a wonderful asset to the city. It is, and is going to be kept, a place where I, or anyone else can take my family and be assured of respectable conditions.

"If you think that a lot of drunken bums can go out there and raise the dickens and get the place in wrong, you're badly mistaken. I'm going to put my foot down here, and put it down hard. You had heard of the Volstead act, hadn't you? And the Wright act? And you knew that it was against the law to pack liquor with you?

"All right—$100 or 50 days in the county jail. You can't pull rough stuff in Mission Beach and get away with it while I'm on this bench."

Moore and Barnes, the other two defendants arrested on the same charge, took the law's limit to plead, their case coming up before Judge Griffin later i nthe week.

FINE NEW ORGAN AND
PATENT SAFETY LOCKERS
AT M. B. ROLLER RINK

Keeping right at the head of the procession of progress, Manager Edward A. Kickham has had upwards of a hundred of the latest patent safety lockers installed for the patrons of his great Mission Beach Roller Rink. The lockers have been conveniently placed in the southeast corner of the commodious building, and each receptacle will hold as much as an ordinary trunk, thus enabling a party of two or three to have the use of the same compartment. A special notice informs patrons NOT to deposit a dime until after they have placed their parcels, hats, wraps, etc., in the locker. The closing of the door automatically assures safety and the numbered key is a receipt and check combined.

In the northeast section of the rink a splendid new electric organ, rich and harmonious in tone, has been installed, and Manager Kickham keeps it a-going with a large assortment of the latest music rolls. The rink is open every afternoon and evening, and the smoothness and spaciousness of the skating floor has won the approbation of hudreds upon hundreds who indulge in the healthy recreation of roller skating.

The chapel of the San Diego Army and Navy Academy at Pacific Beach was filled with an interested audience recently, on the occasion of the declamation contest given by the public speaking class, under direction of Mrs. W. C. Atkinson. First place was given Cadet Lieut. William Bullis Condit for his original oration on the American Constitution. Second place was voted to Corporal Seeley.

The Academy and its many friends throughout the state felt the keenest interest in the musical program broadcasted by the band over KFI last Friday evening. Preceding the program, the band and cadets were entertained at luncheon by Charles O. Middleton of Los Angeles at the Hotel Biltmore. At the close of the luncheon a beautiful cornet was presented to Lieut. Atkinson, band director, as a token of the sincere loyalty and appreciation of the members of his organization who worked with him during the school year. Since the evening of the concert, telegrams and letters from patrons and friends who "listened in" have attested the pleasure given by the concert.

Rehearsals are in progress for the play which will open the exercises of commencement week. "The Thirteenth Chair" has been chosen, and the cast includes the following cadets: Condit, Pereira, Chaidler, Lewin, Decker, Hofeller, James and John McNabb, Nelsen, Bussey, Burke, Ruoff, Henry, Halm and R. H. West. This play has been extremely successful wherever produced and promises an interesting evening to the cadets and their friends. The production is directed by Mrs. W. C. Atkinson, under whose direction the Dramatic society has worked during the year.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

MAGGIE'S WISH

Maggie just hated to waste any time in sleeping. She had so many things she could always do and she never had time to do them all.

A Jolly Little Creature.

She never had time to play all she wanted, nor to read all she wanted to read, nor to talk to her friends, nor to play games and do hundreds of things.

She wished she could skip a night's sleep once in awhile. It was such a waste of time to sleep.

She had tried once going to bed with her clothes on so as to save time and so as to be ready to begin playing at once in the morning.

That hadn't worked out well at all. She had been so uncomfortable and hadn't really saved good playing time in the least.

If only about every two or three days it stayed light at night!

That would be a splendid thing. Then she wouldn't feel sleepy, but would feel nice and wide-awake.

Oh, if only that could happen! Maggie wished so hard that it could.

It was beginning to get dark one evening, and Maggie was slowly getting ready for bed when Maggie leaned out of her window and said, shaking her fist at the moon:

"There is something about you that makes a person sleepy. You look so merry and yet you make a person feel like going sound asleep and having nice dreams instead of staying awake and doing lots of things.

"Why can't you let the sun shine all night for a change? And just have a real holiday of a couple of days?"

Mr. Moon's face suddenly changed and a wide, wide grin came over it.

Wider than Maggie had ever seen. It was an enormous grin. Mr. Moon's face seemed to become brighter, too, even brighter than ever.

Then a jolly little creature dressed in bright orange satin appeared on Maggie's window-sill.

"You want sunshine," said the jolly little creature, "so come with me."

He offered Maggie his arm, and she put hers in his. She was glad she had put on her pale blue wrapper. It looked quite pretty beside the jolly little creature's orange suit.

"I'm the Sun's manager," the jolly little creature said. "I am allowed to wear this bright costume because I'm a bright messenger. All the Sun's messengers are bright because we can't help but pick up bright beams from the sun. He's so bright he just scatters these bright beams about as recklessly as you please.

"How many creatures are bright enough to afford that?

"I'm coming to ask you to go with me to the other part of the world where the sun shines while you, as a rule, sleep, and where they sleep when you are up and about."

Maggie started off at once with the Sun's messenger.

"It won't matter about my having my nightie and wrapper on?" she asked.

"No," said the Sun's messenger. "I'll explain how that happened."

Maggie had a beautiful time—just not going to bed at all—while the sun shone steadily.

Then she was whisked back with the Sun's messenger to her own room just as the sun was rising and peeping in her window.

"Dear me," she yawned, "dear me. I do wish the sun wouldn't be quite so bright. I'd like a little nap now."

But her mother was calling to her to get dressed. Her mother didn't know of her great adventure and so thought she'd be wide awake.

"Dear Me," She Yawned.

Oh, oh, oh, wasn't Maggie glad when the next evening came and when she could go to bed and to sleep. She was glad Mr. Moon looked as though he would be ready to help her sleep and send her merry dreams.

"I wonder," she said, as she waved a good-night to the Moon, "if the reason we all feel so sleepy in the morning anyway is because we have at least taken a little trip with the Sun in our wishes?

"But I'll never ask for an adventure such as I had last night when I went where the sun was. Goodness, I don't see how the sun stands such hours!

"I'm so sleepy." And she spoke the truth. In one more moment she was in bed, and in another half-moment she was asleep.

Run Down

"I've discovered why Bill's toes always go to sleep!"

"Why?"

"Because they turn in."

Community Building

Concrete Sidewalks Finding Much Favor

The use of concrete for sidewalks has become so universal throughout the cities and towns of this country that a town or city of any appreciable size is rarely found in which the sidewalks are not all made of this favored material.

Concrete is now universally accepted as the ideal sidewalk material. Properly built concrete walks meet all the requirements of a good footway. They are durable, smooth without being slippery, and are pleasing and clean in appearance. Good walks are easy to build. It is only necessary to follow a few, easily understood principles, to build concrete walks that are practically everlasting.

Good-Looking and Durable.

Just four materials enter into a concrete walk—portland cement, sand, crushed stone or pebbles and water. When these are combined in certain definite proportions, placed on a prepared foundation and allowed to harden the walk is complete. But the materials must be suitable; the foundation must be properly prepared; and the mixing and placing of the concrete must meet the requirements of sound construction principles. Failure to meet one or more of the above conditions in the early days of concrete-making was the cause of occasional poor walks being constructed.

Future "Old Home" Weeks

The "antiquated" past is not so far in the rear after all. In America it is hardly sufficiently remote to be regarded as historical in the strictest sense of that term. And yet the inclination too often is to believe that all that is worth while in American annals has been written by those of previous generations. It might not be an extravagant statement that at no time since the coming of the first white settlers to American shores has the responsibility of the individual been greater than at the present moment. There are still many old home weeks to be observed, a decade hence, a century farther on. Those who participate in such gatherings will look back upon the building which is now being done, just as we of today look back upon the structure we have received as a legacy from sturdy and high-minded forebears. — Christian Science Monitor.

Time to Plant Trees

Whatever trees we want to plant—and everybody ought to plant trees—should be planted now. The early planted trees get the best chance at making satisfactory growth. If we are going to grow a lawn—and everybody ought to grow a lawn—this is the best time to get the seed in the ground. Hot dry weather is not conducive to growing grass. It takes the cool, moist season of spring to get a new growth for a lawn started. Then if we expect to garden, plant flowers, paint the premises or otherwise let the world know that we are among those present in the world's activities, it is also time to get going. It is the time to leave our hibernating mental attitude and get into the wide-awake swing of real action.—Florence News.

City's Opportunity

Cities have the ambition to aspire to great heights when they have built their foundation with an understanding of the main essentials which go into the development of prestige and good will. Without these attributes, some cities may become richer and greater, but they do not and cannot become better. Troy has the opportunity. Troy may never become the city of half a million people; but Troy may become better and more favorably known than any city twice or three times its size if new standards are adopted and applied.—Troy Herald.

Rattler Need Not Coil

Old Books Best Sellers

Book sensations of the moment are not, after all, the real best sellers. Figures compiled by publishers show that old timers, like "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Robinson Crusoe" and Dickens' novels, are in reality the most popular even today, so far as sales and library circulation are concerned. In India it is said that more copies of "Robinson Crusoe" have been sold in the last five years than were sold altogether in the first five years of its publication.

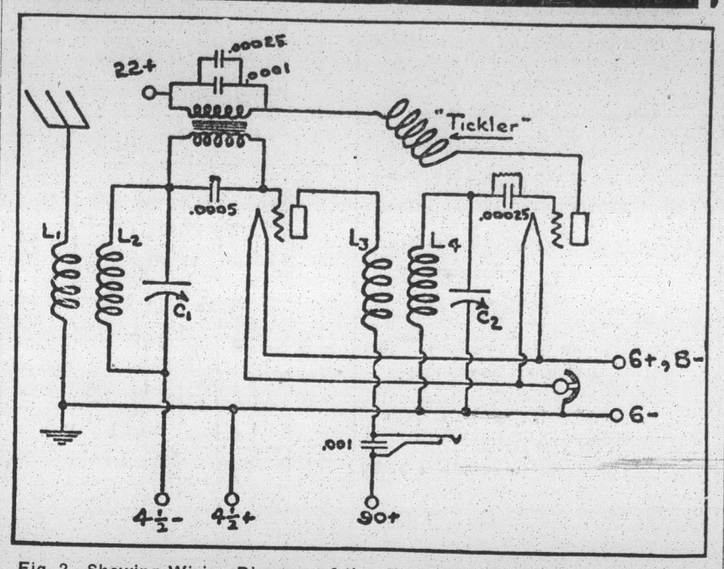

Fig. 2—Showing Wiring Diagram of the Two-Tube Reflex Set. Note: The 22+ Post Is at the Top of the Diagram.

By R. C. HITCHCOCK

With this two-tube set stations 200 miles away can be heard consistently on the loud speaker.

Selectivity is particularly good, and the two main controls make the operation as simple as is consistent with fine tuning.

A panel about 7 by 24 inches would be suitable, and if a cabinet is wanted, it may be 7 or more inches deep.

The circuit is a reflex, with a few unusual features. The first tube acts as a radio-frequency amplifier, the second as a regenerative detector, and the detector output is fed back through the first tube, which then acts as an audio-frequency amplifier. With these two tubes stations are heard clearly on the loud speaker with sufficient volume for all but the largest rooms. A third tube with its audio-transformer may easily be added if one desires to operate a loud speaker at its maximum power on distant stations.

The first tube will do most of the work, as it acts as a powerful audio-frequency amplifier, and also as a radio amplifier. However, this does not overload the tube, as the radio-frequency energy is small. In view of the fact that this tube is working at its limit of capacity, it is necessary to give it the very best possible conditions. For this reason a B battery of the correct value is absolutely essential. A 90-volt B battery and a 4½-volt C battery will prove suitable for a 201A tube, and if a 110-volt B battery is used a 6-volt C battery will be the proper size.

Regenerative Detector.

A regenerative detector is generally conceded to be one of the most economical detectors, and it has in this set the added advantage of coming after a radio-frequency amplifying tube, so local radiation is prevented. This is a great advantage when several sets are close together. A small coil in the plate circuit serves to feed back energy into the grid circuit for regeneration. The placing of the instruments is not critical. A type 200 tube was used for a detector, and if a different type is used the value of the condenser shunted across the primary of the audio transformer may need to be a slightly different value.

Sockets of insulating material proved much more satisfactory than those constructed of metal. General wiring hints are the same as for any other set. Keep grid and plate wires as short and as far apart from each other as possible, and, if they must cross, let it be at right angles. All joints should be soldered with resin as flux.

The low-loss coils were homemade and gave splendid results. The winding form should have 11 spikes put through holes drilled evenly spaced around a 3¼-inch circle in a wooden board. (See Fig. 1.) The wire should be woven around these spikes, and when the required number of turns has been wound the coil should then be tied with string and slipped off the spikes. There will be no difficulty in having these coils support themselves if a stiff enough wire is used; those here shown are of No. 20 DCC wire.

The wiring diagram is shown in Fig. 2. For this set two condensers, C-1 and C-2, of .00035 mfd. capacity were used, and the coils to go with them, L-2 and L-4, have fifty turns each. The other coils, L-1 and L-3, are fifteen turns each. The rotor for the tickler of the detector does not need to be of low-loss construction or have a very low distributed capacity, as it is not in a critical radio frequency circuit. A 2½-inch composition tube with forty or fifty turns of No. 28 DCC wire will be entirely suitable for this purpose. The manner of fastening the tube to the rod is shown in Fig. 3.

Small fixed mica condensers were used, and their values are given in the wiring diagram, Fig. 2.

Testing Set.

To test this set it may prove advisable to try it first as a regular two-tube set; that is, as a detector and one-step audio amplifier, without using the radio amplifier. The internal wiring is exactly the same as Fig. 2; the only change is to connect the antenna wire to the left side of the grid condenser, thus making a single circuit tuner with one control, that of the variable condenser, C-2. With this connection the first condenser C-1 has no effect on the tuning of the set, and the idea is simply to familiarize with the tuning of the detector tube circuit and the working of the tickler. With this connection it is probable only the longer wave stations will be heard, as the wave length of the antenna is added to that of the set. With this arrangement the output of the detector is reflexed; that is, put back through the other tube, so that it acts as an audio amplifier, though not acting as a radio amplifier at this time. By tuning the dial of the condenser C-2 stations should be heard. It may be better to use a headset for this part of the test, as only when the first tube is doing its double duty does the set give power enough for the loud speaker.

If stations are heard statisfactorily, connect the set as the wiring diagram shows, with the antenna wire on the first fifteen-turn coil. This makes a two-circuit set out of the first tube, one of the circuits being tuned with C-1, and a three-circuit tuner out of the second tube, two of the circuits being tuned—one with the condenser C-2 and the other with the tickler. If you do not hear stations clearly with the antenna on the second tube's coil, try turning the tickler around, as it may be connected up wrong; simply rotate the tube 180 degrees. This will bring the tickler in the proper relation to the grid coil, if it was wrong at first.

Tuning.

With the antenna connection in place on the first coil, turn back condensers together to tune for a station. It is best to turn the condenser C-1 (at the left) slowly, and to sweep the second one back and forth until the familiar "chirp" of the carrier wave is heard; then tune in the station by reducing the feedback of the tickler. At all times the tickler should be turned so it has the smallest possible influence on the rest of the set. For short wave lengths it will be noticed that the best position of tickler is at nearly right angles to the grid coil, and for the longer wave lengths it is best when about parallel with the turns of the grid coil.—New York Herald-Tribune.

When Audio-Frequency Transformer Burns Out

When an audio-frequency transformer is burned out there is usually an open circuit in either the primary or secondary. This may be tested by connecting a dry cell and a pair of phones in series with the winding. That is, connect one tip of the phones to the dry battery. The primary should first be tested, as that winding is usually the first to burn out. This is done by attaching a wire from one terminal of the primary to the vacant terminal of the dry cell and the other end of the phone cord to one terminal of the primary. If a click is heard when the circuit is completed there is a current flowing and the primary of the transformer is all right. This should be repeated in the same manner to test the secondary, only the secondary terminals should be used instead of the primary. If the click is again heard the transformer is not burned out.

Winding Coil

Before winding a coil dust your hands with talcum powder to keep the wire covering from getting soiled and to lessen chance of breaking the insulation.

Literary Treasure Found

Book six, mysteriously missing for 387 years from the otherwise complete seven-book manual of architecture prepared by the Italian, Sebastiano Serlio, royal architect to Francis I, who brought the Renaissance to France, has been found and is now in the possession of Columbia university. How the book was lost was never disclosed, and the fact that it had never been published, will not bring about a revision of modern judgment on the French Renaissance, according to Prof. William B. Dinsmoor, the librarian in charge of it.

Serious operation avoided

Resinol healed stubborn sore

Elyria, Ohio, March 1:—"I feel it my duty and pleasure to thank you for the wonderful cure your Resinol salve has wrought for my husband, who suffered from an open sore on the back of his neck for four years. Several doctors said that it was a cancer and advised its removal, but it was so near the base of the brain that we feared an operation. I had found Resinol Ointment so effective for cuts, burns and similar things that I induced my husband to try that. After using only two jars of Resinol, the sore entirely healed—every trace of it has disappeared. Resinol certainly was a God-send to us!" (Signed) Mrs. E. E. Kennedy, 243 E. 8th St.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

KEEPING WELL

GOITER

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

GOITER is an enlargement of the thyroid gland. This structure, one of the largest glands in the body, lies at the base of the neck.

Goiter has been recognized for centuries. It was known to the Greeks and Romans. It has been common for hundreds of years in certain districts in Switzerland, France and the Balkan states, not only among human beings, but also among calves, lambs, pigs and fishes. Tradition and popular belief attributed this enlargement of the gland to drinking water from certain springs and streams. It was never found along the seashore or among people who ate large amounts of sea food.

Scientific knowledge on the subject is just catching up with popular belief. Recent investigation has proven that simple goiter is due to lack of iodine in the body. This was discovered in a curious way.

The Pennsylvania state fish commission found that goiter was becoming so common among fish that it considered abandoning its fish hatcheries. Doctors Marine and Lenhart were asked to investigate.

They found that the water in the hatcheries and fish ponds was lacking in iodine. So they added a small amount of iodine to the water and goiter disappeared.

Doctor Shira, the health officer at Akron, Ohio, heard about this. Doctor Kimball, the local school physician, had found in 1920 that over half of the girls in the public schools had goiter. So the doctors asked the girls if they wanted to take iodine to prevent or cure goiter. Half of the girls agreed, so 5,000 were given a small amount of iodine in their drinking water for two weeks each spring and fall. The other 5,000 girls drank ordinary water.

Not one of the girls who drank the iodine water developed goiter, while 27 per cent of those who drank ordinary water did develop it.

Three years ago, iodine and chocolate tablets were given to all the school girls of St. Gall, Berne and Zurich, Switzerland, and the amount of goiter in these three cantons has been reduced nearly 75 per cent.

Now, Doctor Olin, health commissioner of Michigan, has issued an order prohibiting the sale of any salt in the state which does not contain iodine.

It is too early to say positively what the result will be. It is apparently proven that goiter is caused by lack of iodine and that a small amount in the food or water will prevent this condition.

So the old Greek physicians who burned seaweed and sponges and gave the ashes to their goiter patients weren't so foolish, after all.

Better Mailing Week

INTERESTING FACTS AND STRIKING SLOGANS OFFICIALLY ISSUED

Throughout the good old U. S. A. postal officials are concentrating public attention upon this as "Better Mailing Week." Postmaster H. K. Rankin has supplied "The Beach News" with an array of interesting facts and some choice slogans issued by the government, of which the following are chosen:

Everyone knows his own address,
If not that of his correspondent.
A return address on each piece of mail
Would put the Dead Letter Office
Out of business.

Do You Know

That 21,000,000 letters went to the dead letter office last year?

That 803,000 parcels did likewise?

That 100,000 letters go into the mail yearly in perfectly blank envelopes?

That $55,000 in cash is removed annually from misdirected envelopes?

That $12,000 in postage stamps is found in similar fashion.

That $3,000,000 in checks, drafts and money orders never reach intended owners?

That Uncle Sam collects $92,000 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the dead letter office?

That it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 yearly to look up addresses on misdirected mail?

That 200,000,000 letters are given this service, and that it costs in one city alone $500 daily.

And Do You Know

That this vast sum could be saved and the dead letter office abolished if each piece of mail carried a return address, and if each parcel were wrapped in stout paper and tied with strong cord?

Moral: Every man knows his own address if not that of his correspondent.

Put it in the upper left-hand corner.

A Nixie piece of mail, so carelessly addressed and poorly wrapped that it cannot be delivered nor returned without special treatment costing $2,000,000 a year.

POINT LOMA BREEZES

Winifred Davidson, in "Lyric West"

Our South breeze is an actress, who skips with practised grace;
This West's a coyish lassy, who dreams beside the sea.
The East's a flirt, a fliskmahoy, a flippant brazen-face;
And our North's a giant dancing, a gay, gray giant dancing,
A defiant giant dancing—dancing frenziedly.

It's a joy to watch our South breeze trip down Gill's field of grass,
I thrill to have this West breeze whispering love to me;
But one still more diverting than the East up Gage's Pass
If our foggy cold one jazzing, our groggy bold one jazzing,
Our frampold flogging North breeze, jazzing shamelessly.

PENTECOSTAL FEAST PROVES DECIDED SUCCESS IN ROSEVILLE

The Portuguese society at Roseville is receiving congratulations upon the remarkable success of their annual Pentecostal feast under the splendid management of Manuel Monise and his wife, Hazel. The Sunday morning procession was unusually fine. Miss Alice Silva made a very pretty picture carrying the magnificent silver crown, which was decorated with lovely sprays of lilies of the valley; and Miss Evelyn Monise was a charming queen of the feast.

Many hundreds attended, among them being a large number of out-of-town guests. Over $550 was cleared at the auction of gifts. The Thursday Sewing club had made a beautiful silk sofa pillow, which brought $23.50. Little Rosaline Fernandez made a butterfly tray which went for more than $10. One of the most laughable surprises was a box of kittens which realized $65. This fund goes to the society for expenses of the feast next year.

Dancing in American and Portuguese style filled in the hours between feasts, which were prolonged from Thursday until Sunday night. The annual election of officers will take place at the next meeting of the society. All were enthusiastic over the success for which Mr. and Mrs. Monise were so largely responsible.

DR. GEORGE WALLACE PLEASANTLY SURPRISED ON HIS EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY

A pretty and most pleasant surprise party in honor of Dr. George Wallace's eightieth birthday was given by the members of Trinity Mission at Ocean Beach, of which he is rector, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Wallace, 4826 Voltaire avenue, last Monday evening. The occasion also celebrated the establishing of the mission by Dr. Wallace four years ago this month.

In acknowledging the affectionate greetings of his people, Dr. Wallace assured them that in the more than fifty years of his work as a clergyman, he had never known greater loyalty and earnestness than he had found in Trinity Mission, and expressed his conviction that their hope for a church building was to be realized in the near future. He also mentioned that he was the oldest Episcopal clergyman in the diocese of Los Angeles.

Dr. Wallace cut the first piece of birthday cake, a dainty orange colored confection resting in an artistic basket decorated with fern and yellow flowers. Fruit punch and homemade cakes were served.

The hostess committee consisted of Mrs. A. M. Morgan, Mrs. E. F. Oakes and Miss Sara Hardy. The other guests were Mrs. Carrie S. Borcherdt, Miss Agnes G. Ells, Miss Kate Hardy, Mrs. Emma B. Winans, Mrs. Lavinia A. Watkins, Mrs. Freda S. Boy, Mrs. Lillian W. Parker, Mrs. Laura A. Paddock, Mrs. Lena Drexler, Mrs. Mamie Brown, Miss Emma MacDonald, Mrs. Ella M. Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BEING NEIGHBORLY

THOSE attractive communities nestled here and there in quaint rustic places, where the bees are humming, the wild grasses are waving in the passing breezes, and the tinkling of bells is heard in the purple pastures, tell a beautiful story of peace and content.

Often far away from the clamorous haunts of mortals where gold is god, driving, lashing, heaping burdens of care upon galled shoulders, stealing from life its sweetest delights, these little hamlets, when one comes unexpectedly upon them, seem to reflect the quietude that we imagine exists among the courts of Heaven.

A few scattering cots where everybody is neighborly, tell a story of friendliness and sodality of which the nations throughout the world seem quite unfamiliar.

Being neighborly is the simple secret of universal happiness, the panacea of world ills, ruptures and revolts.

Although the happy man feels very kindly toward others, others must reciprocate the feeling to get happiness all around, and this all around happiness is available to everybody.

Who does not catch something of the thrill of delight experienced by two lovers in the lane, loitering hand and hand?

To them buttercups are as sweet as roses, the sky is always blue, the sun is perpetually shining and the birds are singing for no one else.

And so it is with the folk in the humble cots, contented with their station in life, pouring praises each day from their hearts which seldom find utterance in words, but stir their souls to sublime emotions.

We may be highly meritorious, we may have the power of a king, the learning of a Mecaenas, the wealth of the Indies, but if we are not neighborly we cannot be happy, at peace with others, or escape wrangles, wars of words and murderous arms.

If neighborliness does not come out in our behavior toward one another, there is within the soul an unfriendly sentiment, in spite of our affected smiles and assumed good manners.

When once the high places of the world decide to be neighborly and put their decision into actual practice there will be no more "rumbling of caissons and guns," no more killing of brothers and wanton waste of priceless treasures, impoverishing peoples for ages.

The Blossoming Child

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WONDERS of Nature all around—
And yet the very queerest,
The one that folks have always found
The strangest and the dearest,
Is not afar afield somewhere,
But in a cradle over there.

For who has watched an opening rose
Some country hedgerow under,
Has seen its lovely lips unclose,
Nor marveled at the wonder?
But stranger than the woodland wild
Is this, the blossoming of a child.

And you who o'er the cradle bend,
If you neglect your garden,
Shall fail to nourish and defend,
What God could ever pardon?
A wonder He has given you,
And yet a wealth of duty, too.

For you must keep the weeds away,
Each tempter that assails it,
Must watch the blossom night and day
With love that never fails it.
Oh, what a privilege is this,
Life's opening petals thus to kiss!

And it shall poorly bloom or fair,
As you shall see your duty,
Shall bloom according to your care.
A thing of blight or beauty,
God grant you see the wonder of
Your rose, and watch, and 'tend, and love!

Your Last Name

IS IT CHAMBERLAIN?

THIS name belongs to the class of official nomenclature, and like Stewart is derived from what was originally a more humble office than it later came to be. The chamberlain was probably in early times an official attached to the household of a king or lord, though it later came to be restricted to very high judicial office. The name is spelled in various ways in old records, though at the present time the only forms usually found, besides Chamberlain, are Chamberlin and Chamberlen. The spelling Chamberlain is very much more usual than the others. Chamberlayne is a usual form in old records both here and in England.

One of the large families of the name in England claimed descent from the counts of Cantarville, who were hereditary chamberlains of the dukes of Normandy and early Norman kings of England.

During the reigns of the Stewart kings there were a number of noted physicians belonging to a French family of Chamberlains. This family is said to have been founded in England by William Chamberlain, a Huguenot who fled to England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

In this country there have been two governors of the name. Daniel Henry Chamberlain, governor of South Carolina, and Joshua L. Chamberlain, governor of Maine.

LUTHER—This is a German family name derived from an old German personal name, Luther, which is the equivalent of the French Lothair. In this country there is a Rhode Island family of the name who claim Welsh descent, though I cannot find the name in Wales. They were prominent Baptists and founded one of the earliest churches of that denomination in this country.

SOMETHING TO EAT

EVERYBODY likes or should like asparagus. Dressed with a generous allowance of butter, perfectly seasoned and hot, it is a dish fit for the gods.

Asparagus Soup.

Cook two cupfuls of asparagus in three cupfuls of water. When tender, rub through a sieve and add one pint of white sauce, using two cupfuls of milk, thickened with two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked together until smooth before adding the milk. Season with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, a few dashes of cayenne and one-fourth teaspoonful of white pepper, with one teaspoonful of sugar. Boil up once and serve with a spoonful of whipped cream on top of each cup and hot croutons.

Chicken in Asparagus.

Cook fowl until very tender and divide into eight pieces for serving. Roll each in seasoned flour and brown lightly in sweet fat. Make toast, cut into good-sized rounds, butter them and lay in a shallow baking dish, place a piece of chicken on each round and surround with hot cooked asparagus which has been cut into half-inch lengths. Pour over all a hot white sauce to which beaten egg yolk has been added after taking from the fire. Stir rapidly and garnish with toast points to serve.

Liver en Casserole.

Slice calf's liver as for frying and cook at simmering temperature in salted water for twenty minutes. Drain and chop fine, add a clove of garlic chopped or a tablespoonful of onion, with salt and pepper to taste. In the bottom of the casserole place a half cupful of well-washed rice, spread over this one chopped carrot, the liver and the liquor in which it was cooked (there should be two cupfuls), add two tablespoonfuls of butter spread over the top of the dish. Bake sufficiently long to cook the rice. Just before serving add a half cupful of cream and sprinkle with minced parsley. Remove the cover and let stand in the oven five minutes, then serve.

Spanish Lamb.

Slice raw potatoes very thin and put a two-inch layer in a greased baking dish. Season well with salt and pepper and moisten with gravy, adding a teaspoonful of scraped onion. Now add a few layers of thinly sliced roast lamb, season and cover with a small can of tomatoes. Cover with a layer of well-buttered crumbs and set in the oven well covered to cook an hour, then remove the cover and brown the crumbs. Serve with the top of the dish sprinkled with a few spoonfuls of cooked green peas. Beef (roast beef) is used for this dish also.

Savory Smoked Fish.

Cut into strips one pound of any smoked fish; put over the fire in cold water and let come to a boil, cooking ten minutes. In another saucepan heat one cupful of stock with one-fourth cupful each of tomato sauce, vinegar and a tablespoonful of made mustard, and a dash of cayenne. Cook the drained fish in a hot pan with one-fourth cupful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of flour; stir this into the saucepan containing the fish and seasoned stock, cover, simmer for five minutes. Serve on a hot platter surrounded with Boston crackers, split and toasted. Salmon and finnan haddie are especially good prepared in this manner.

Stuffed Halibut Steaks.

Choose two good steaks of equal size and place in a hot, well-greased pan over the heat. Prepare the following stuffing: Squeeze two slices of bread from a cupful of hot water and while hot add two tablespoonfuls of butter one-fourth teaspoonful each of salt and pepper, one tablespoonful of either capers or finely chopped pickles, two teaspoonfuls of onion juice and one beaten egg to bind. Turn the browned side of one of the steaks and spread the stuffing over it. Lay the browned side of the other steak on the stuffing, place in the oven, sprinkling well with paprika. Serve with tomato sauce.

World Has Little Use for the Hobo Laborer

He is almost a memory, this old-time hobo laborer; he is gone because the need for him is gone. The industrial conquest of the country is accomplished; what remains to be done is extension, development, stabilization.

Industry no longer calls for pioneer labor, but for labor only. And the man who feels an urge to go away out there and help out on that big job has a hard time of it. Alaska, Canada, Mexico, the Argentine—yes, a man can strike out for those places. But there has been no excited talk in employment offices about work in foreign parts for a long time.

Panama is past, it has been a long time since the Canadian transcontinental roads were spiked, and the government railroad in Alaska—oh, lads, where'll we go? The Roman soldiers asked the same question, no doubt, when Rome conquered no longer, and so did adventurous sailors when the great days of the exploring navigators were done. And what became of Mark Twain's hordes of rivermen? Where are the snows of yesteryear?

Camp life still goes on, of course, in the woods, on construction work, and in the oil fields. But these camps are nowadays populated largely by laborers who support families, and who own cars, tailored clothes and bank accounts. The old-timers spin yarns of the happy days as they crouch around the bunkhouse stove, and they sometimes inspire a young laborer who has the soul of a roving adventurer. If he tries the box cars, he finds a dead life. If he journeys in an old flivver, he discovers something better, but not adventure.

The dance hall, the joy-ride, an occasional moonshine spree, poker and dice and the punchboards—these are the most spectacular elements in the life of the American laborer today. Its last raw, vivid colors went out with the hobo, and only the drama of sweat and effort is left. But this plain, simple drama has significance and merit, and, finally, the best words to be said for the hobo is that he was a hero in it.—James Stevens, in Century Magazine.

Pike's Peak Or—

The late Antonio de Novellis, the veteran musical director, who superintended the original American production of the "Mikado," has a very low opinion of jazz.

"The men who declare that jazz is a sign of progress in American music," Mr. De Novellis said one day in Flushing, "are as ignorant of music as the farmer was ignorant of photography.

"A farmer took his bride to a photographer's and said:

"'We want the wife's picture took.'

"'Full length or bust?' the photographer asked.

"The farmer gave a hearty laugh and slapped the photographer on the back.

"'All right; make it full length, young feller,' he said, 'and if she busts I'll pay for the machine.'"

Dollar Came Back

In 1878 a Confederate veteran named Dobey left South Carolina for Tennessee with his family. Ill fortune went with them for a while, for their home burned down and members of the family became ill, so that when the only money in their possession was an initialed silver dollar they parted with it reluctantly. Mr. Dobey goes on with the story: "Not a dollar has since fallen into my hands without my scrutinizing it to discover those initials. A few days ago a man called to me on the street and said, 'Here is the dollar I owe you.' As was my custom for 46 years, I looked for the initials, and to my great joy that dollar had the letters W. E. D. engraved on it."

Baseball in Argentina

Baseball has at last gained a place among Argentine sports, though as yet a small one. Two teams, composed of natives, have been organized, coached by Americans, one representing the Buenos Aires Y. M. C. A., the other the Gymnasium and Fencing club, the principal athletic club of Buenos Aires. Increasingly large numbers of spectators watch the games which they play with each other, with teams of American residents, and with one team of Japanese residents. They field and bat well, but have yet to develop pitchers able to fool their American or Japanese opponents often enough to win a game from them.

He'll Never Get In

William Milligan Sloane, the historian, is president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and in New York the other day a young novelist of the psycho-analytic or jazz school ridiculed the distinguished institution mercilessly. He said the French academy was no good, and the American academy was only an imitation of it.

When the jazz novelist got through Professor Sloane gave a good-natured laugh and said:

"Our American academy is like death. People only joke about it when they know there's no danger of its coming their way."

Helium Used as Starter

Helium, the non-combustible gas used in filling the lighter-than-air craft, has found another use. It has always been impossible on the Los Angeles to carry enough compressed air intact for the purpose of "kicking over" the engines in starting. Experiments conducted at Lakehurst, the naval air station, have developed the fact that this gas can be used successfully in starting the big motors of the craft.

TREASURES IN INDIAN GRAVES

Plunder Taken From Panama's Old Cemeteries.

Perhaps the most interesting cemeteries in the world, those of an ancient Indian race of which little is known, are situated near Bugaba, Chiriqui, Panama. Formerly the graves covered a vast territory, but many have been opened and plundered.

In 1857 a Spaniard who was digging on his plantation in Panama unearthed a grave that contained some gold ornaments. He continued to dig and gathered a fortune before his secret became known. Then everyone began to hunt for gold and thousands upon thousands of graves were destroyed and countless priceless relics were broken and lost to archeologists.

An idea of the number of graves may be had from the account of Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, who crossed the isthmus from David to Bocas del Toro, 50 years ago. He writes: "A mile outside of Dolega the party stopped at the house of Robert Soles, the discoverer of the golden relics in the Indian graves of Chiriqui. All the way from David we had ridden through thousands of these ransacked graves, and in every direction for leagues and leagues . . . we might have seen tens of thousands more."

Between 1858 and 1868 thousands of pounds' worth of gold ornaments were shipped to the Bank of England and melted for bullion, and thousands of beautiful pottery vases were broken and covered the ground on the site of the graves. They were of many sizes, shapes and designs, some plain, and some fancifully decorated with quaint and grotesque human figures, some painted in patterns, and some molded in relief. A number had three legs that were hollow and contained little balls that rattled when the vessel was handled. In those vases gold ornaments were frequently found, and it is supposed that the loose balls in the legs were to scare away evil spirits.

Few implements of stone are found in the graves, except a few celts, or grooved axes of stone, a few long knives, and once in a long while an arrow head. Fine metates, or mortars of stone, are sometimes found, carved in the shape of a jaguar or a frog or an armadillo. Stone molds in which some of the gold ornaments were made, and also goldsmith's tools of stone, found in the graves, show the people to have been far advanced in civilization.—Youth's Companion.

Bobbed Teachers Barred

School teachers in the state of Entre Rios, in northern Argentina, who have had their hair bobbed have been nervous during the last three months of the annual vacation for fear that their locks would not grow long enough to pass the inspection of the educational authorities, who have decreed that there shall be no more short-haired teachers. The teachers regard this edict seriously, for positions for women in Entre Rios are not too numerous. The authorities have made no ruling regarding the right of the pupils to wear their locks as they desire, but they hold that they have authority over teachers and principals and that those whose hair is in the prevailing fashion when the schools resumed their sessions need not expect employment.

Light Transmission

A new kind of glass, of organic origin, which is reported to permit the passage of ultraviolet light, has recently been perfected by two Austrian scientists, Herr Pollak and Herr Ripper. The new glass is called pollopas, and it is made by a chemical condensation of urea with formaldehyde. Pollopas is considerably lighter than ordinary glass, weighing about one and one-half times as much as an equal volume of water, while common glass often has triple this weight. It is quite soft, being somewhat softer than mother of pearl, and is easily abraded. It is very transparent.—Science Service.

Too Late

A wild-haired, morbid young man was raving about the emptiness of life.

"The sooner the world ends the better," he said. "We all ought to be annihilated."

"My dear fellow," his friend replied, "the world's packed with interesting things. They've just discovered that human life began on this earth about a million years ago—and you talk of wiping us all out."

"A million years ago?"

"The papers are full of it."

"Oh, well," said the morbid man, miserably, "it's too late to do anything about it, then."

School Laxity in China

Many Chinese schools have failed to open this year and others have been greatly hampered in their work by the disturbances in the country and lack of funds. The education department of Peking university, however, has continued its work, with an attendance of 600 students and steady progress has been made on the new buildings and teachers' residences under construction.—School Life.

Fall in Dairy Products

A decrease of $66,000,000 in the farm value of dairy products produced in 1924 as compared with 1923, is shown in estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, which place the 1924 value at $2,586,148,000 compared with $2,652,419,000 in 1923. The decrease is attributed to lower prices for all farm dairy products except buttermilk, whey and skim milk.

That is what causes that grainy appearance, that muddiness, sallowness, pimples, blackheads, acne, red spots, and that impossible "something" which no face cream, massage, or face powder can cover up or beautify! The foundation for a beautiful skin simply is not there, and no face treatment can give it to you. But increase your red-blood-cells, — and quickly the ruby tint of purity begins to glow in the cheeks, the complexion becomes Venus-like and immaculate! Try it. It will do it every time. S. S. S. builds the red-blood-cells you need for a beautiful complexion. Begin using S. S. S. at once, and give yourself what you have been working for, for years.

HANDSOME KNITTED APPAREL; ENTER THE JUNE BRIDESMAIDS

TO PLAN a trousseau without calculating upon a generous quota of stylish knitted togs, who would be so unwise? For touring about in motors, "doing" the art galleries and museums, stopping for luncheon here and there and at country club, as brides en route are wont to do, there is more satisfaction and comfort-giving in one handsome knitted costume which is ready for every daytime occasion than in a number of frocks which stand not the test of the elements plus the wear and tear of travel.

Starting, then, with the premise that a stunning knitted frock is essential to the bride's happiness, comes the urge to seek out the best that the knitted outerwear departments and specialty shops are showing—for to the bride the world of fashion would bring its choicest. The distinguished looking knitted frock here pictured is an answer to the call for something decidedly handsome. It is styled after modsh, slender redingote lines, is knit of kasha-colored wool and interknitted with flecks of almond green. The front vest panel extends from neckline. It is in almond-green fiber silk, knitted in drop-stitch effect. A soft green suede belt with burnished buckle imparts a fine finesse.

To further tempt the bride-to-be are knitted frocks not only of color glory, but with unique trimmings of leather, suede, silk braid and tinsel embroidery.

Among knitted ensembles available are dresses of intriguing color and design with matching scarfs, the latter sold as a separate accessory.

Very attractive knitted separate coats are among the season's offerings. These are collared and cuffed with clipped wool simulating fur. Sometimes a pattern is interknit at the border. Such a wrap is a valuable asset to the bride's trousseau.

Although the colorings are exotic and the treatment of detail novel and often complicated an effect of tailored simplicity is ever maintained throughout knitted modes with lines which stress the slender silhouette.

If the procession of bridesmaids in this year's June weddings do not enslave all eyes, it will not be the fault of stylists who have planned their gowns. Everywhere the glamour of lace and silk and the inspiration of lovely shades in colors, are leading the fancy of designers a merry dance—and a graceful one. Fashion has turned from the straight and narrow way of unbroken lines and has taken to flares, featuring panels, uneven hemlines and fuller skirts. There are any number of alluring new things in frocks that combine soft fabrics in plain and printed patterns or lace with chiffon, crepe de chine or silk.

But simplicity is not altogether banished from the mode, it matches up too perfectly with young girlhood to be neglected by designers of youthful frocks and it emphasizes the beauty of some materials. A case in point appears in the gown of silky lace pictured in a blonde lace posed over a peach-colored silk. The lace would look well over other colors, as orchid, light green, canary or powder blue. The story of design is so simple that the picture tells it all—just a shaped bodice a little longer than the natural waistline would make it, and a full skirt. Edges are bound with the silk, and velvet ribbon deeper in tone than the lace makes a finish for the neck and a band about the skirt. The blossom and leaves posed in the front of the skirt will be selected to harmonize with whatever color is chosen for the silk underdress. Silk stockings and satin slippers in the new honey color will correspond with this dress in any of the colors suggested for it.

CUSTARD CAKE IS GOOD FOR CHANGE

Two Ways Given for Mixing Confection.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are two ways of mixing custard corn cake, states the United States Department of Agriculture. By the first method the meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar are cooked in a double boiler for about ten minutes. When the mixture is cool the eggs, well beaten, are added, and the soda, dissolved in one tablespoonful of cold water. By the other method all the dry ingredients, including the soda, are mixed together, and then the sour milk and eggs, well beaten, and the butter are added. If the second method is followed the cold water is not needed.

Splendid Dish for Dinner.

Custard Corn Cake.

2 eggs	1⅔ cupfuls cornmeal
1 cupful sugar	⅓ cupful wheat flour
1 teaspoonful soda	2 tablespoonfuls butter
1 teaspoonful salt	1 cupful cream or milk
1 cupful sour milk
1 cupful sweet milk

Mix all the ingredients but the cream and butter as directed. Melt the butter in a deep pan, using plenty on the sides. Pour in the batter, add (without stirring) a cupful of cream, and bake 20 to 30 minutes. When cooked there should be a layer of custard on top of the cake, or small bits of custard distributed through it. This serves six persons. It is a lunch or supper dish, or, if the sugar is omitted, it may be used to accompany the meat and vegetables at dinner.

SPRING TONIC FROM THE POULTRY FLOCK

Egg Yolk Heads List of Iron-Rich Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Why buy spring tonic from the drug store when the hens are working overtime to produce an abundance of eggs which are far more effective as a source of iron? Egg yolk heads the list of iron-rich foods and is one of the best possible means of supplying the body with this valuable mineral, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It contains phosphorus and calcium, too, elements needed to build bones, teeth and other tissues. The white of eggs comes very near to being pure protein, which is one of the chief substances of our bodies. Eggs are also rich sources of vitamins those A B C's of the diet needed to promote health and proper development. Taken all in all, then, the hen beats the doctor as a mixer of spring tonic, for she combines minerals with other valuable foods in a form that the body finds particularly useful.

Every homemaker alive to the effect of the daily meals on health, plans to use an abundance of eggs in the spring. This is good economy as well as good nutrition.

There are so many appetizing ways of using whole eggs or the yolks and whites in separate dishes that the family need never tire of them. Use the yolks left over from prune whip or other dishes requiring a large proportion of whites, in place of butter in Hollandaise sauce. This egg-yolk sauce is excellent served hot with fish, poached eggs, or vegetables such as asparagus, cauliflower, or even plain cabbage cooked just long enough to make it tender. Persons who do not enjoy mayonnaise dressing because of the oil, will also like this sauce cold on salads.

Egg-Yolk Sauce.

4 egg yolks.	½ teaspoonful lemon juice.
½ cupful water.	½ teaspoonful salt.

Mix the ingredients by stirring rather than by beating, and cook over boiling water until thick. Stir constantly, and be careful not to overcook the sauce so that it separates.

Custards, steamed or baked, soft or stiff, are year-round standbys in most households. In the spring, however, the homemaker can afford to be more generous with the eggs. The family will enjoy a soft custard served with stewed fruit or pudding occasionally instead of cream.

In these and many other ways, the clever homemaker can put so much iron in the daily meals that there will be no need for the patent medicine man's tonic.

PROPERLY LABEL STORED CANNED GOODS

But Few of These Jars Were Properly Labeled and the Housekeeper Will Find It Troublesome to Locate Those She Wants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although at the time of canning one thinks every jar of jelly, jam, or canned goods will be remembered and identified easily, when winter comes one is often doubtful, until a jar is opened, whether it holds blackberries or black raspberries, plum or currant jelly. It is also useful to know the date on which the food was preserved or canned, and if more than one method has been used to have that information on record. Peaches, for example, may be canned in heavy sirup for some purposes and in a light sirup for others. Second extraction jelly is usually less clear than the first extraction, and one would be more likely to use it up "on the family" than to serve it for a "company" jelly or give it to others. If pectin has been used in the making of some of the jellies the fact should be recorded for future reference.

Mark Cans and Jars.

Another point is to mark all cans and jars so that every jar in each lot can be identified in case spoilage develops in any of the jars. Jars should be kept under observation at room temperature for a week, and any showing signs of spoilage discarded. Others of the same lot should be watched until it is certain that they are keeping. The method of canning and length of time of processing are useful facts to have on record, when one is canning the same fruit again or giving directions to some one else. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests labeling all jars and cans with a neatly printed or written label, giving such information as the above and any further statements deemed necessary.

Labels may either be purchased or made at home by cutting plain paper in pieces about 1 by 2 inches; they should be pasted on the jars at a uniform distance from the bottom.

Handle With Care.

Fruit, vegetables, and other canned goods should not only be carefully put up and labeled, but they should also be carefully stored. This means that a clean, cool, dark place should be provided. A cupboard with strong, rather shallow shelves and close-fitting doors will protect the products from dust, dirt and light. If the shelves are wide enough to hold only a row, or at the most two rows of cans, it will be easy to find any particular can. For the first week each lot should be stored by itself in order to facilitate watching for signs of spoilage.

With a closed storage cupboard it will not be necessary to wrap glass jars of strawberries, peas, and other fruits and vegetables that fade when exposed to the light.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By inclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.

VISITORS INVITED TO INSPECT AND APPROVE PROMINENT CLUB

On the curve where West Point Loma boulevard joins Abbott street at the seashore front in Ocean Beach, there is located the reposefully attractive building of the Sunset Supper Club, established since 1917 as a modernized epicurean and terpsichorean resort for members known to the management.

It is owned and controlled by George Toponzes, a prominent and popular San Diego restauranteur, who makes his residence at the club and has made a host of friends through his genial disposition and general courtliness.

Under his personal direction, the well known semi-private institution is conducted in strict conformity with the law.

Proof of the excellent morale insisted upon by the management is furnished in an open invitation to preachers and police alike, to prohibition enforcement officers as well as temperance committees, for an inspection and approval of the premises at any and all hours.

The club is maintained as a resort for private dinner parties, and for the recreation and entertainment of members, while a splendidly organized orchestra furnishes excellent dance music and vocal selections during the evening hours.

The club rooms are posted with conspicuous signs forbidding the use of intoxicating beverages and patrons are particularly requested to observe the rules of decorum.

And, in all truth and fairness, it can be said that the regulations are adhered to quite generally.

Manager Toponges is very emphatic in his assertion that "a square deal" is all he asks from friend or foe in any eulogy or criticism of the Sunset Supper Club, an institution which he will endeavor to maintain as a pleasantly social place for members and their friends to while away an evening with good food and delightful entertainment provided under very enjoyable conditions.

And when at last they left the place,
The cooks cried, "Did you ever!"
It took two extra mules to haul
Those chaps back to the river.

There was a Young Men's Boating Club on the bay. This organization entertained the young ladies of the town with an excursion in the yacht "Restless" to Ballast Point and return, after lunch at the barracks (Fort Rosecrans), and danced to Dick Kerren's band music.

1879 was another unusual year! It began and ended with good rains, but there were long months when, like the present dry season, there were more signs of rain than fulfillment. Even the weather was a scarce topic that year. The only reference I find to good weather is in a short letter from an eastern visitor, asking Editor Gunn to republish an extract from Howells' "Venetian Life," "hoping that it may be read by invalids who are seeking a pleasant and healthful retreat from the rigors of a northern and eastern climate."

"I know that we have beautiful days at home—but we do not have this 'Blue, unclouded weather' day after day, week after week, month after month—weather that contents all your senses, and makes you glad to be alive, with unutterable gladness, like that of children, or of the swallows that here all day wheen and dart through the air, and shriek out a delight too intense to precipitate for song."

Yet, because we on Point Loma, at Ocean Beach, at Mission Beach, have seen it day after day, week after week, month after month and year after year, we know that back there when they were so busy calling Dennis Kearney and his crowd "bold blatherskites" and the like, the 'blue unclouded weather' was one of the staples notwithstanding.

The nearest approach to local excitement to be found in the news of 1879 is that of the discovery of gold placer diggings on the shore of the bay, recorded in the Union of June 3:

"It appears that a gentleman named Pilling, who has been residing here for some time for his health, in his rambles along the beach, some months ago saw the color of gold in the sand, and on prospecting found that it yielded a few bits to the pan. Since that time, it is stated, he has panned out about $50 worth of dust, which he sold at one of the banks. This excited curiosity, and on Saturday morning persons who saw him at work went and prospected the beach and also found 'color.' The news spread very rapidly, and on Sunday the whole beach was staked off in claims. It is said that the prospectors have obtained 'color' in every pan. We do not suppose that the discovery will prove more important than any of the numerous 'finds' of the same kind that have occurred from time to time along the whole coast of California. Auriferous sand has been found all the way from Oregon down, but the deposits have never proved of sufficient extent to result in more than temporary work. Only a short time ago, it will be recollected, such a discovery on the ocean beach near San Francisco was announced. It has long been known that an occasioal 'color' could be foud on the coast near San Diego. Ten years ago auriferous sand was found on the shores of False Bay, and in 1869 Frank Kimball got 'color' on the beach at National City. We suppose there will be rockers at work soon on the beach here, when the value of the 'new diggings' will be tested."

The next day came this item—the last of the gold news:

"The excitement over the bay shore placer diggings seems to have moderated. We found two or three Indians on the ground yesterday, panning out black sand with a 'battea.' Notices of claims are posted all along the beach."
